TOURISM ON THE GALAPAGOS ISLANDS

Hundreds of tourists are flocking to the Galapagos Islands for the peace and quiet, beauty and various animals and plants, many of which only exist on these islands. In the 1970s, the Ecuadorian government started to encourage tourism, with great success. The islands now receive over 160,000 tourists a year, and this tourism is worth over $200 million a year to the Ecuadorian government. The money that tourists pay to enter the islands' national park areas pays for the maintenance of the national parks on the Ecuadorian mainland, as well as the Galapagos Islands themselves. If the Ecuadorian government did not encourage tourism on the Galapagos Islands, they would not be able to keep other national parks open.

This text is about

- A. the problems the Galapagos Islands' national parks face.
- B. the economic importance of the Galapagos Islands.
- C. the bad sides of tourism on the Galapagos Islands.
